Franklin Delano Roosevelt, often called FDR, was the 32nd president of the United States. He gave a series of recorded speeches on the radio during his presidency (1933-1945) called "Fireside Chats." Using this new media form, he was able to communicate with the American people during a dark and uncertain time in the nation's history. Click here for some additional background on FDR and the New Deal We're going to closely analyze one of the Fireside chats over the course of this week.	Meet the Recording Click here to listen to the recording (start at 0:41). Click here to look at a transcript of the document What do you hear when you listen to the recording?
