

1. When you compare two or more people or things, you use plus (+) ... que, moins (-) ... que, and aussi (=) ... que. Study the following sentences.

Le jean est plus cher que le pantalon.
 Le jean est aussi cher que le pantalon.
 Le jean est moins cher que le pantalon.

Note that “cher” is in its masculine singular form because it agrees with “le jean” which is masculine singular.

Take a look at the following sentences:

Les sandales sont moins confortables que les baskets.
 Mais elles sont plus confortables que les chaussures.

Note that “confortables” is its feminine plural form because it agrees with “les sandales” which is feminine plural.

Note the liaison with plus and moins when followed by an adjective starting with a vowel (or an h):

plus intéressant(e)(s)
moins élégant(e)(s)

2. You use the stress pronouns moi, toi, lui, elle, nous, vous, eux, and elles after que/qu’ when comparing people:

Stressed pronoun	Pronoms accentués
Me	Moi
You	Toi
Him	Lui
Her	Elle
Us	Nous
You	Vous
Them	Eux (masculine) Elles (feminine)

Elle est plus sympa que moi.
 Elle est aussi sympa que lui.
 Elle est moins sympa que nous.

Le comparatif des adjectifs 230

Use the following adjectives to compare two people you know:

grand _____

petit _____ sociable _____

intéressant _____ dynamique _____

amusant _____

beau _____

sympa _____

sérieux _____

Translate this:

My brother is taller than me.

My mother is more beautiful than them.

My father is less serious than you think.

My sister is as intelligent as you all.

My favorite cousin is as interesting as him.
